

KNOW WHAT YOUR WORK CHARACTER IS

Before you decide to stay or leave your work, ponder on this list and see which character you relate to the most.

THE FULL-OF-SELF

You might not admit this but if your workmates describe you as arrogant and boastful, you surely have gone far beyond than being an optimist.

THE FAULT FINDER

You usually complain or point out mistakes in your company to selected colleagues. It's as if you want to leave but don't have the courage to do so.

THE MARTYR

You're the first to arrive and the last to leave the office. You believe the superiors will repay your hard work and sacrifice.

THE OPTIMIST

You have 3 principles in your work: live by the company culture, work with people happily, and take initiative to solve problems.

THE PARENT-LIKE

Your colleagues see you as a mother or father figure who ensures their well-being with concern, selflessness, and care.

THE HUMORIST

Your sense of humor makes you the life of the party. But there are times you find it hard to take things seriously.

THE FRIENDLY

You love making friends in the workplace; the connection you establish with them inspires you to get tasks done.

THE KILL JOY

You never fail to find a reason to say "no". If you think you possess this personality, then you're probably not happy with your profession the way you're supposed to.

THE EXPLORER

You wake up every day craving another work-related challenge; you're restless, active, and excited of the unknown.

resumeprofessionals.com

You pave your own career path with the decisions you make and the character you present. So make sure you have a clear understanding of who you are and what you can do. Seek the help of Resume Professional Writers, the number one provider of resumes, to start you on the right road.

Source: Salary.com, Reader's Digest