Resume Trends

to Equip You for Your Job Search

Here are the top resume trends you must follow as you write your resume this 2020!

1. Showcase your soft skills.

Recruiters now give more importance to a candidate's soft skills. So, strike a balance between showcasing your EQ and highlighting your hard skills, targeting both your strengths and the job requirements.

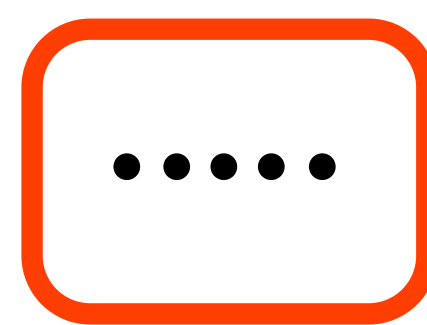

2. Quantify your achievements.

Use numbers as you talk about your accomplishments. This lets recruiters have a better grasp of how you can deliver the job well and how much you can contribute to the company.

3. Use dynamic action verbs.

Action verbs improve your resume's impact as recruiters can easily spot your competencies through these words which also serve as powerful resume keywords.

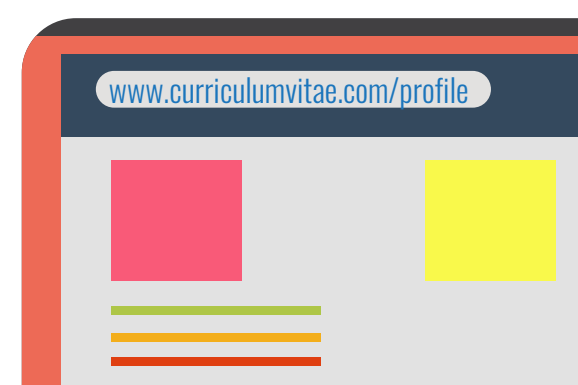

4. Highlight your technical skills.

Give light to your tech skills (programs, software, and computer languages you're proficient in) and list them on your resume for that extra boost in your application.

5. Link your social accounts and sites.

According to a survey by Robert Half International Inc., "social networking and promoting an online portfolio or personal website are the top ways job seekers can get a leg up on the competition."

6. Keep your resume concise.

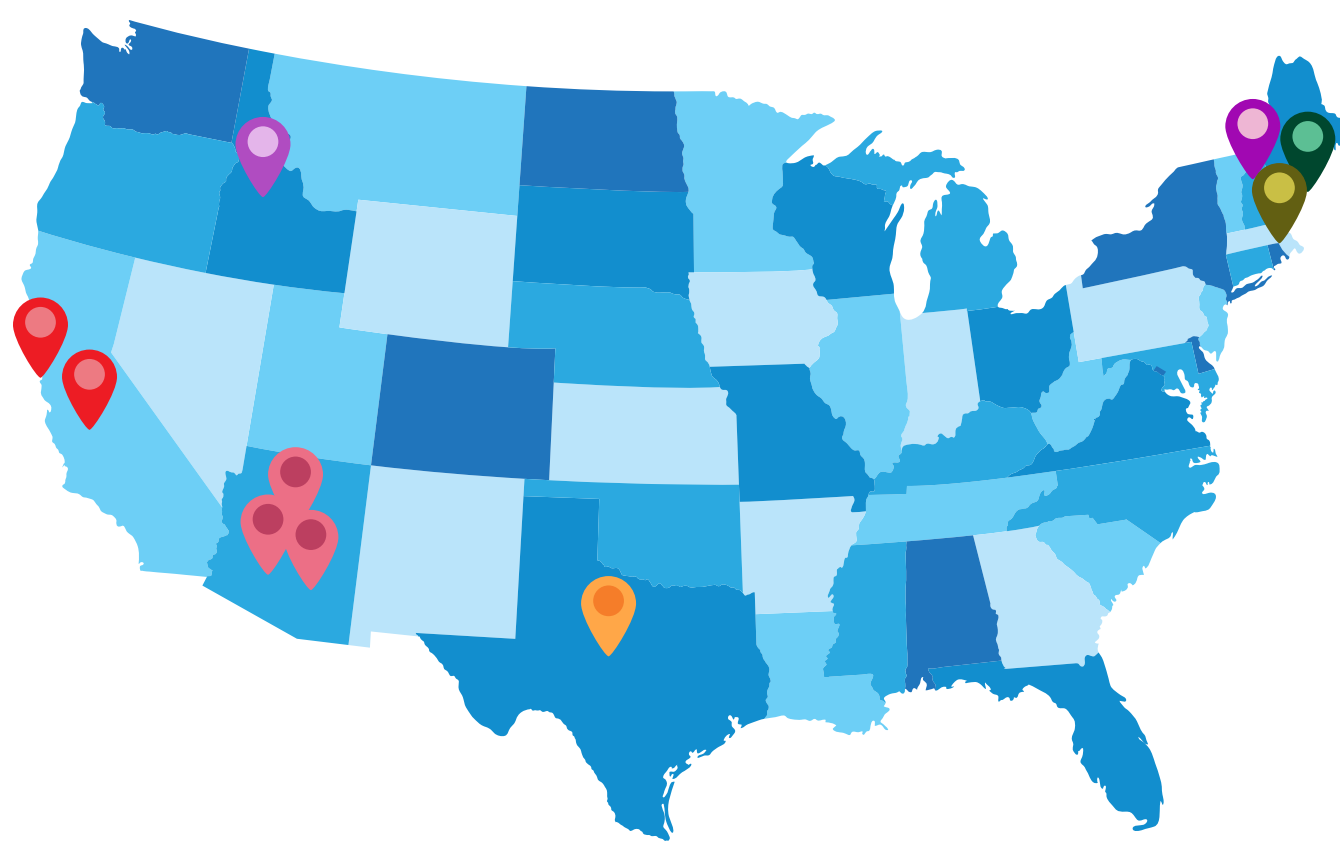

Shorter and more concise resumes help you narrow down your work experiences to the most relevant ones only. Since recruiters don't have much time to go through long resumes, this technique will surely impress them.
