PROS

You need not worry about its format.

Templates have formats you can follow to help you choose what to add to your resume and where to place the details. Further, following a format will make it easier for you to write your own copy.

You have an organized copy.

Templates offer a "no-clutter" approach in resume writing. In fact, every detail is in its proper place, from your work experience to your academic achievements.

You must only send needed details.

You must only send needed details. Everything you must write in your copy is already placed in the sections. Likewise, you need not worry about what info you should use to complete your job application tool.

You can finish your resume in no time.

Without having to worry over the layout and other stuff, you can finish your copy faster. In particular, a template can help you if you need to rush your application.

CONS

Your resume looks much like the others.

Chances are many applicants have used the same template, too. This practice can make your copy look ordinary and won't make you stand out above other job seekers.

You can't make a flexible copy.

It'll be tough to tailor your resume based on your preference. Besides, IT resume templates limit the creative and custom approach you can apply to it.

You can't highlight a specific qualification.

Since it's hard to edit a template to suit your preference, it'll be tricky, too, to reorder its content to highlight a skill or qualification.

You can't customize it to display your IT experience to the fullest.

You can't just tailor your resume to show your online portfolio. Further, it'll be hard if you want to focus it on your IT training than on your job experience because a template limits you from making such changes.
